1. In late January 1952, the Barracks Construction Bureau of the Fukien Military District Supply and Service Command requested the Foochow Government Construction Company to assign four engineers to the Supply and Service Command to study the strength and shock resistance of reinforced concrete.
 the Fukien Military District would soon begin to rebuild coastal defense works. 25X1
2. On 28 January, forty motor-driven junks constructed by the Mawei (119-26, 25-59) Dockyard sailed from Foochow for Changchou (117-42, 24-32), Amoy, and other points along the south Fukien coast. These vessels have probably been allocated to the Chinese Communist Coastal Patrol Units of South Fukien.
3. On 6 February, one regiment of Fukien public security forces stationed in the Foochow suburbs boarded boats at Foochow for Nanp'ing (118-08, 26-39), where it will assume defense duties along nearby highways.
4. The dormitories at Tungyuehmiao (東嶽廟) just outside the East Gate of Foochow were formerly for families of cadre members serving at 10 Army Group Headquarters. These families have now moved elsewhere, and the dormitories are being rebuilt as a prison which will accommodate about 3,000 persons.
5. Construction work on the barracks at Nanching (117-31, 24-35) is being continued. On 30 January forty-five truckloads of cement were shipped to the building site.

7. Minch'ing (118-50, 26-12) Field Hospital of the Fukien Military District recently received orders from the East China Military Area to prepare for 3,000 wounded officers of the Anti-America Aid-Korea Volunteers Army. The Field Hospital is calling large numbers of medical and nursing personnel in Foochow for service, and is making other preparations to handle these patients.
8. On 7 February 1952, about 1,000 wounded or sick officers from the Korean front arrived in Foochow from Kiangsi. These included over 600 from the 58 Division, 20 Army, 3 Field Army; over 300 from the 47 Army, 4 Field Army, all of whom are Fukienese; and about 100 from the 19 Army Group, 1 Field Army, all of whom are Fukienese. They have been temporarily placed in various sanatoriums outside the East Gate of Foochow.
9. Partially disabled veterans returned to the Fukien Military District since the outbreak of the Korean war number 1,850. The only organized facilities for taking care of these veterans is one veterans school, which has a maximum capacity of 500 persons. Personnel in the Medical Department of the Fukien Military District say that one additional veterans' school and one veterans' training and feeding center will be established in Fukien, which will be able to take care of all disabled veterans now within the province.
